This explanatory letter is being sent to all parties to whom EPA sent general notice letters. We have since heard from some of you and understand there may be a request for a general meeting in mid-January and an extension of our suggested response time from December 28, to late-January. Understanding that Portland Harbor is the first large multi-party Superfund site in Oregon, we thought a letter of explanation of some of our key goals and expectations might be helpful, and could perhaps serve as a substitute for, and be more efficient than, a large meeting. We emphasize that anyone with questions should not hesitate to call one of EPA's project managers, Wallace Reid (206-553-1728) or Chip Humphrey (503-326-2678), or one of EPA's attorneys, Elizabeth McKenna (206-553-0016) or Charles Ordine (206-553-1504).

Our primary reason for preferring this written response in lieu of a meeting is our goal of having a first round of sampling work to occur during the upcoming summer sampling season. If we target August for sampling and calculate backward, we find that delaying negotiations until February could result in missing this sampling opportunity. RI/FS Order negotiations have a 90-day statutory negotiating schedule which has proven challenging at large complex sites in the past. Assuming negotiations begin in mid-January, and that negotiations go smoothly, a signed AOC would be achieved by mid-April. Respondents will then have to prepare and submit a first set of deliverables (Phase I Work Plan of projected sampling, with Sampling and Analysis Plan and Health and Safety Plan). An ambitious submission date would be mid-May. EPA, in coordination with DEQ, federal natural resource trustees (NOAA and the Fish and Wildlife Service) and six Tribes, would then supply comments which would likely necessitate meetings to reach compromises among Respondents and reviewers. This would lead to resubmission of this Phase I Work Plan by mid-July, at the latest, to permit mobilization and sampling in August. Based on our collective experience, we believe any additional negotiating time we can build into this schedule may prove critical to collecting data this summer.

In order to facilitate the foregoing, and to manage the site as efficiently as possible, we hope to use lessons learned over 20 years of experience in Region X with large, multi-party Superfund sites. Among those lessons is that large PRP groups, especially those with members with little or no big-site experience, are inefficient (generating the kind of legal fees Superfund's critics like to cite) frustrating both Respondents and EPA. At the remedy implementation stage this can be unavoidable, but our experience is that formation of a large PRP group at the investigation/feasibility stage generally has little if any benefit.. With this approach, EPA recognizes the need to create incentives for participants and assurances for non-participants, allowing entities with more Superfund experience to perform the study with substantial efficiencies.

The Duwamish Superfund Site in Seattle, which shares some similarities with Portland Harbor, can be a useful model for the RI/FS stage of the process. At Duwamish, four out of potentially hundreds of responsible parties have agreed to perform the RI/FS. At Portland Harbor, if EPA had only a small subset of responsible parties come forward to perform the RI/FS, EPA would: 1) defer recovery of all past costs to the remedy implementation stage, 2) emphasize that participation does not mean or imply greater or lesser comparative responsibility, 3) have identification of early action-area candidates as an RI/FS task, but not obligate Respondents to implement early actions, leaving implementation to separate Orders with appropriate parties based on location-specific criteria, and 4) assure non-participant small businesses of prompt notification should their property or interests be uniquely implicated. We emphasize that we are available to discuss these and other negotiable criteria with any party, and that an individual reply to our general notice letter is not required by every recipient.

Certain other key matters deserve emphasis. First, the Superfund process at Portland Harbor (as at Duwamish) interfaces with the listing of anadromous fish species under the federal Endangered Species Act, which species are also the subject of treaties of the United States with recognized sovereign Indian nations. This means EPA consultation and coordination with the species-listing agencies and Tribes regarding remedial decisions will be especially critical. Second, the recipients of this letter and our general notice letter do not represent a complete list of potentially responsible parties, nor do they imply greater responsibility for recipients than non-recipients. Recipients were selected because they were previously noticed in one manner or another by DEQ, or are riparian owners/operators of facilities within the initial EPA six-mile National Priorities List assessment area. Prior riparian owner/operator contributors, as well as non-riparian contributors, undoubtedly exist and are obvious omissions. EPA has not yet conducted the kind of PRP search it normally undertakes for large sites, but will conduct one in the future. PRP search costs would be another cost category EPA would defer to remedy implementation if an efficient RI/FS could be promptly undertaken.

We hope this letter clarifies our intentions. We look forward to hearing from you.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in black ink, appearing to read "Wallace Reid", is written over a printed name and title.

In order to facilitate efficient communications with Potentially Responsible Parties associated with the Portland Harbor Superfund Site, EPA is requesting corrected "Registered Agent", "Responsible Official", "Technical Contact", and "Legal Contact" information. EPA also requests that you review the mailing label on the envelope this information request was included in. Please let EPA know if the individual and company names are correct, and whether the spellings are correct. Also review the street/mailling address for accuracy and spelling, as well as the zip code, and whether a nine-digit zip code is available. Finally, review the referenced property physical location information on the label. This location information should accurately describe the location of riparian properties from which hazardous constituents may have entered Portland Harbor. Please add to, subtract from, or correct this physical location information as appropriate.

This information request is voluntary, intended solely to facilitate efficient communications.
